

Handwritten text in an ancient script, likely Pahlavi, on a fragment of aged parchment. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines, though some characters are obscured by the fragment's irregular edges and wear. The script is dense and cursive, characteristic of the Sassanid period. The parchment is heavily stained and discolored, with some small holes visible. The text appears to be a fragment of a larger document, possibly a legal or administrative record, given the use of some recognizable characters like '𐭠𐭣' (the word for 'and') and '𐭠𐭥' (the word for 'in').